United Irish League Directory a Truly Representative Body.

Ball Rolling That Will Soon Drive Lord Clanricarde From Galway.

STAGE OUTRAGE RESENTED IN DUBLIN

Preparatory to the great battle for Ireland, soon to be begun in the British Parliament, writes the New York Times correspondent from Dublin, the National Directory of the United Irish League, which is the in that Parliament, held their seventh annual meeting in Dublin a few days ago. A truly representative body this National Directory is, They elected officers and passed resolutions embodying their attitude on about every important public question in Ireland. Two of these-the first one and the last one of about a dozen-are of great moment to Ireland just now. First John E. Redmond, as member of the Standing was proposed for membership. County Committee of the National Directory, moved that "We declare in the name of the people of Ireland that the National demand remains unaltered and unalterable for a native Parliament, with responsible Executive, having power over all purely Irish affairs," etc. That was the first resolution unanimously carried. After passing several other resolutions bearing on Irish necessities. Redmond again moved, and it was carried unanimously, that "The Standing Committee is hereby directed, at the earliest possible moment after the Government scheme for Irish government in Ireland is produced, to summon a National convention to decide the ques tion of what the attitude of the Irish party should be to this measure; and that we appeal to our people in every part of Ireland to at once organize themselves so as to insure that this momentous National assembly will be thoroughly representative of the whole Irish people."

Poor Lord Clanricarde! There is hardly any one in all Ireland or England, even in the House of Lords, se poor as to do him honor with all his £30,000 a year from his Irish estates. The division was notified that all members were expected to approach holy communion on Sunday, March 17, and upon motion the County officers were asked to select the church of the patron of the order-St. Patrick's. The members present were decidedly opposed to holding a banquet in celebration of St. Patrick's day, but offered no objection to a postponement of the entertainment that was to be given at Macauley's until after Easter. Ten members were reported by the Visiting Committee as on the sick list, but fortunately none were in a serious condition.
